

CARRIER AND MILLER'S STYLE OBSESSIONS

1. Hubbard Street Dance Chicago: "Modernizing dance with a repertoire system of choreography, they commission masters like Twyla Tharp." Twyla Tharp's The Princess and the Goblin

2. Hollywood glamour: "Set design from '40s and '50s films—like in the movie To Catch a Thief—define a glamour still referenced today. The stylized interiors continue to look chic and appropriate."

3. New York City architecture: "It's a story of history, scale and glamour from one block to the next. It's a luxury to live with this experience every day."

4. The Beatrice Inn: "It feels like a private club, with a great wooden bar. The back fireplace room is cozy and chic." 285 W. 12th St., 917.566.7400

5. Artist Leah Durner: "Inspired by fashion and history, Durner's work is sensual, and layered with illumination and clarity."

Tailored Tastemakers

The duo behind Carrier and Company are creating utterly chic yet comfortable rooms adored by fashion designers and media moguls alike.

Jesse Carrier and Mara Miller of Carrier and Company (carrierandcompany.com) get the magic mix of interior design just right—so much so that the married couple has won the approval of such luminaries as Vogue editor-in-chief Anna Wintour (whose Long Island retreat they decorated in English country style), designer Jason Wu (his Carrier-designed office is a surprising blend of industrial and antique) and MTV founder Bob Pittman (for him, they whipped up an art-filled urban lair). Genial, level-headed Carrier, 39, describes the quintessential Carrier and Company room as "comfortable but stylish, tailored and edited. It's confident, but also timeless in the world—it survives trends." Adds Miller, 40, the elegant, self-designated "taskmaster" of the duo: "We don't have a packaged look. We want our projects to look easy and be easy to live in." —James Servin
